A: You can use both Office versions. It depends on the prerequisite support, which you can find on Microsoft site for both applications. Publisher - This component is for the Office client applications, such as Word, Excel, Access, PowerPoint, Outlook, and Publisher, in both 32-bit and 64-bit versions. Office Tools - This component is for the Office server applications, such as OneDrive for Business, SharePoint, OneNote, Project, and Visio. In all versions of Office, this component enables both 32-bit and 64-bit client applications to communicate with the server applications. Office Client - This component is for Office client applications that are not running on a server (32-bit and 64-bit), such as Word, Excel, and PowerPoint. In this component, a 64-bit component is required for OneDrive for Business and 32-bit components are required for SharePoint and Project. Office Online - This component is for SharePoint Server 2011 (Online/Farm). It is preinstalled on the Office Live Small Business server. "Office 2010 Multi-Language Pack" = Publisher only and is required for Office2010, which can be downloaded as a part of the MSI package. Colleagues at the American University of Beirut took part in the commemoration on the outbreak of war at the request of the presidents of the groups in this city, for which the Ministry of Education in Lebanon was not invited. It seems that it was not possible to reach agreement on this event, as the Lebanese government did not want to have the Israeli flag raised in Lebanon for the first time since the end of the war of 1982. As for the participation of individuals, the British ambassador in Lebanon, Gilbert Moore, expressed the wish to be present. On arrival, in the morning, representatives of the Presidency of the General Security Organization were present, and then the event was at the invitation of the Presidency of the Municip
